LINER'S MESSBOY DIES

Lionel Haskell Injured Aboard
Liner President Hoover
When Bombed

M. C. Ford
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
SHANGHAI, Aug. 31.—War-torn Shanghai, already sufficed with horror, saw civilian blood spattered on its sidewalks again today, when a fleet of war planes bombed two hundred refugees and wounded soldiers awaiting transportation at a bus station near Woosung. First report said the attacking planes were Japanese.
Scores of persons were reported killed in the bombing.

Death of a wounded seaman aboard
the American steamer President Hoover, today spurred determination of foreigners to flee this battle-scarred
port, which resulted in a wild stampede to transportation offices.

Lionel Haskell, a messboy, one of seven injured when the three aerial bombs dropped by a fleet of Chinese war planes, died today.

Chinese contention that the President Hoover was struck when the pilot
mistook her for a Japanese transport,
was given credence with an official statement declaring one of the bombs
hit the steamer of a Nipponese troop
at the very moment the American vessel was under fire.

Chinese officials declared the President Hoover was next a number of Japanese vessels at the time of the attack, leading the Chinese airmen to believe the American ship was a Japanese transport.

An "unknown number of casualties"
occurred when the transport was hit,
officials said.

FALLS TWP RENEWS FIRE PROTECTION AGREEMENT

Will Again Pay Borough of Morrisville the Sum of $500 for Services

AGREEMENT IS SIGNED

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 31.—The Falls
Township Supervisors have agreed with the Borough Council to continue paying $500 for the services of the Morrisville Fire Department for fire protection in Falls Township. Such an agreement has been in effect for several years and it was renewed at a meeting of council.

Morrisville had served notice on the Falls Township supervisors that unless the $500 was paid by September 1,
the fire protection service would be discontinued, but when the supervisors agreed to continue the agreement the local authorities voted there shall be no interruption in the service.

The money was due Morrisville
June 1, but because the Falls supervisors were endeavoring to get a reduction in the annual fee, payment was deferred until the two committees could discuss the situation.

Falls supervisors pointed out their township now has a fire company of its own, located in Fallsington, and a new fire apparatus was recently purchased. If the fee to Morrisville was cut down the supervisors could donate more money to their own company, they explained.

There had been a suggestion at one time that the Morrisville Fire Department protect only that section of Falls Township south of the Bristol Pike and cut the fee in half, but many held this would be unsatisfactory.
There is one section of Falls Township where there are a score or more of costly dwellings located about two city blocks from one of the Morrisville fire houses, while it is three miles to the Falls fire house. These residents would object strenuously to such an arrangement. Morrisville borough officials also said they would not be interested in this arrangement, declaring they saw all kinds of trouble and mixups in answering such calls.

One of the plans suggested by some of the Morrisville councilmen was to charge Falls Township a half mill on its assessed valuation of properties

New Speed Laws Effective On Highways, Wednesday

HARRISBURG, Aug. 31.—(INS)—
The Commonwealth will give its "go ahead" increasing the legal speed limit for Pennsylvania motorists but will raise a deterring hand on women's work this Wednesday.

Two major items on Gov. George H.
Earle's legislative program, along with many other more minor ones, a "streamlined" motor code and the women's 44-hour work week bill, go into effect at that time, September 1.

The State Industrial Board, administering the women's work bill, was to meet here today to formulate a general policy of enforcement and issue final rules and regulations. It is studying more than 160 requests for exemptions, asked by scores of industries and businesses.

Secretary of Labor and Industry Ralph M. Bashore estimated that the women's law would increase employment by at least 20,000 in the state and may reduce unemployment relief rolls
by 60,000 persons.

The new motor code changes, which also reduce drivers' license fees from $2 to $1, are expected to cause more than a little trouble to municipalities, although the revisions were looked upon as a boon to motorists.

The code outlaws 20-mile speed limits, permitting municipalities to establish upwards of 25-mile limits, providing official markers are set up every eighth of a mile.

This means thousands of signs must be scrapped. It was estimated that it would require 11,000 signs to post
the city of Pittsburgh.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

The Guffey Incident

ONE of the President's strongest journalistic supporters, who has been deeply pained by recent developments, commenting upon
the extraordinary collapse
of his program
in the recent session, anxiously declares that "if
Mr. Roosevelt is to save his administration from three more years of this kind of futility it would seem imperative for him to bring about a better meeting of minds with a growing rebellious section of Congress and at the same time tone up public sentiment in his own behalf."

"BUT," sorrowfully adds this still loyal friend, "he unfortunately gives signs of preferring another course." And then, from the same newspaper source, comes this comment upon the recent and highly sensational speech of Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania, "It was an exhibition of bad taste and worse judgment, and we hope most sincerely that Senator Guffey was personally and solely responsible for it." It is significant that hope is expressed here, but not belief.
The reason is perfectly simple.

No one—literally, no one—believes that Senator Guffey was "solely responsible." No one who knows Mr. Guffey, knows the sort of man he is, knows the sort of politician
he is, the sort of politics he plays, knows his political alliances and his record, can believe for one moment that this canny cautious man made any such utterances
without consultation and approval;
that without being pushed he exposed himself to the inevitable counter-attack; that either the words or the music of this strange bottle hymn were his own.

THE REAL importance of this Guffey incident, as pointed out by the President's grieving friend, is that it is an unmistakable indication of the "course Mr. Roosevelt prefers." In support of this conviction it seems worth while to reassemble certain connected and relevant facts. In the first place, it was on the heels of a "harmony"
dinner which he helped promote that Mr. Guffey delivered a really vicious attack upon the Supreme Court, at the same time denouncing by name four of his Democratic colleagues—Wheeler, Burke, O'Mahoney and Holt—calling for their defeat at the polls because they opposed the President.

AS A RESULT of this extraordinary outburst, Mr. Guffey the next day took a terrific drubbing from the above mentioned Senators.
Among other things, it was charg-

AGED MAN KILLED; HIT BY TRAIN AT EDDINGTON

Victim Identified As James
Moore, Itinerant in Community For Past Month

SPENT NIGHTS IN DEPOT

EDDINGTON, Aug. 31.—An itinerant man, identified as James Moore, 72, was instantly killed this morning on the P. R. R. when struck by the Manhattan Limited, eastbound, at the station, here, at 6.40, d. s. t. A shoe was knocked off Moore's foot and went through a window of the waiting room, breaking a large pane of glass and showering the waiting room with it.

Deputy Coroner Dr. James Lawler
was called, and after an investigation said he believed Moore's death was an accident.

Moore, according to Roger McElwee, State Road and Bristol Pike, had been "hanging" around the neighborhood for the past month. "He obtained his meals from residents of the community and from the institutions in that section.
He slept in the waiting room on the east-bound side at night," McElwee stated.

"Some time ago Moore was a patient
in the Philadelphia General Hospital and was to have returned there for an operation. He had been admitted to the hospital for treatment," Mr. Mc-Elwee said, "through the efforts of the Red Cross."

The body was taken to the Molden mortuary at Bristol.

er's bridal gown and veil; she carried nished by the Misses Velma Swift and

ents of many gifts.

DEMOLISH THEATRE TO MAKE WAY FOR NEW PLAY HOUSE

Progress Slow On Razing Fire-
Damaged Riverside
Building

TO OPEN NEXT WINTER

Will Seat 800; To Be Built of Steel, Concrete Blocks;
"Tile" Front

Work of demolishing the fire-damaged Riverside Theatre, is now underway, but the progress is slow thus far,
in view of the fact that there are but two of the men employed on the work,
and these have worked for four days.

The damaged structure is being razed to make way for a new modern theatre to be erected upon the site by interests represented by Michael H.
Egnal, attorney, with offices in the North American building, Philadelphia.

Speaking today Mr. Egnal described briefly the character of structure that is to be erected, and said that it would represent a modern, fire-proof theatre. The play-house will be operated by Mr. Egnal's father, James Egnal, who now operates the Theatre in Bridgeport, Pa. "It will be a popular priced theatre," said Mr. Egnal, "and we will present a type of entertainment we feel the people of Bristol
are not getting now."

The building will be constructed of steel, concrete blocks, with an imitation tile front. There will be seating capacity for 800 people, and there will be one store on the Radcliffe street front. The entire project, it is estimated, will cost approximately $50,000.
No apartments are included in the present plans. The construction work will be supervised by Michael Egnal.

Mr. Egnal stated that it is planned to open the play-house either in December or January, "and we have in mind the conducting of a contest for the selection of a name for the theatre." Then discussing further the policy of the new house Mr. Egnal said "Our slogan for our Bridgeport house is 'A complete show not shown anywhere
at the same price' and this will guide
our policy at the Bristol house."

The work of demolishing the old Riverside Theatre building is being done by Mike Jacovone and Herbert Peters, and it is expected that additional men will be added within the next day or two.

The Riverside Theatre was considerably damaged by fire on August 2nd, and it was stated at that time by Howard I. James, representing Mrs. William E. Doron, owner of the property, that the theatre had been sold some time previously to a man named John P. Morgan, who later transferred the title to Anna Fleisher, whose address was not given.

The Riverside Theatre, since its erection, was operated by numerous companies and individuals as well as the late William E. Doron, the owner.
For a time it was very successful, and then with the erection of the Grand Theatre on Mill street, the patrons of the smaller house dwindled to such an extent that it ceased to be a paying proposition. The building was leased
by the Grand Amusement Company, operators of the Grand Theatre, who have kept the place closed. This lease will expire December 31st.

VERSATILE MR. MCNINCH

President Roosevelt has appointed Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the power commission, to the chairmanship of the communications commission which is under heavy fire, right now, because of alleged political favoritism and a tendency to encourage radio monopoly. With the delightful versatility characteristic of New Deal jobholders, Mr. McNinch does not propose to relinquish his power chairmanship in order to take his communications chairmanship. He merely will take a "leave of absence" from Job No. 1 in order to handle Job No. 2.

There are a couple of interesting angles to the McNinch appointment. Washington dispatches describe him as "one of the closest advisors of President Roosevelt." It is only natural, perhaps, that Mr. Roosevelt should want one of his closest advisors at the head of the communications commission at a time when members of Congress are asking questions about a large radio corporation's motives in putting Mr. Roosevelt's chief press agent, Charles Michelson, on its payroll.

And just who is Mr. McNinch? New Dealers will be prompt to remind you that he was first appointed to the power commission by former President Hoover. That is true. It is also true that Democrats in the Senate bitterly opposed Mr. McNinch's confirmation, charging that he had been an active ally of Bishop Cannon (surely you remember Bishop Cannon!) in certain political activities in 1928. By a rather interesting coincidence President Roosevelt designated Mr. McNinch to the communications commission chairmanship on the very day of Senate confirmation of another of Mr. Roosevelt's appointments—that of Tom Heflin's old political ally, Hugo L. Black, to the United States Supreme Court.

ISN'T THAT NICE!

Former Mayor James J. Walker of New York has been appointed assistant counsel to the New York transit commission, "to direct and supervise the co-ordination of the commission's activities in connection with the projected grade crossing eliminations in New York City."

That is nice.

Former Mayor Walker's salary will be $12,000 a year.

That is nice.

This appointment will make Mayor Walker eligible for a large pension for life when he retires from the new job. Mayor Walker doesn't have a pension, right now. It will be recalled that he abruptly resigned the New York mayoralty five years ago, after Samuel Seabury had finally cornered both Mr. Walker and the gentleman who then was Governor of New York State and obliged the latter to hear charges against the former. When Mr. Walker quit under fire and hurriedly left for Europe, the Governor promptly grabbed the credit for Judge Seabury's investigation which he previously had tried to obstruct. The Governor's name was Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Former Mayor Walker has returned from Europe and now is a New Dealer in good standing. The New York transit commission is dominated by influences unfriendly to the LaGuardia administration. Mr. Farley is lacking a former Tammany judge, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, for mayor against both the regular Tammany organization and the LaGuardia Fusionists. Jimmy Walker and Jim Farley always have been good pals.

amid a bower of palms in the spacious living room of the Lefferts' home, was performed by the Rev. James R. Galey, pastor of Bristol Presbyterian Church. Joseph Martini and his orchestra played the wedding march.

The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Haney, Drexel Hill, and George W. Lefferts, Hulmeville, served as best man. William L. Williams, Edgely, and Eleanor Lefferts, Hulmeville, were bearers of the ribbon forming an aisle through which the bridal party walked.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her grandfather, was gowned in white mousseline de soie, fashioned princess style with V-shape neckline, and full skirt with inserts of lace. With this was worn a short sleeved jacket. The bride wore her mother's bridal veil of tulle, with a Duchess lace cap trimmed with orange blossoms. Her slippers were white, and she carried a shower bouquet of white asters and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaid was attractive in a gown of poudre blue crepe made jacket effect with short sleeves. She wore a rose pink bandeau and slippers to match, and carried pink asters and blue delphinium.

Miss Eleanor Lefferts was attired in green-dotted white organdie, fashioned with a form-fitting bodice with short sleeves and long full skirt. She wore a corsage of pink asters.

A reception was held at the Lefferts' home following the ceremony. Sixty guests attended from Edgely, Bristol, Bethlehem, New York City, Long Island, Westport, Conn., and Boston, Mass.

Weekly Letter to Home-Makers

A Letter Written by Miss Edna M. Ferguson to Home-Makers will appear in each Tuesday's issue of The Bristol Courier. Through this medium Miss Ferguson will give many helpful hints to home-makers.

Dear Friends:

It won't be long now!

Monday, September 6, brings the very last of the succession of Summer holidays—those long-anticipated days that seem to fly so swiftly once the season starts.

Because Labor Day is the last stand in the picnic campaign, fresh-air lovers like to make the most of this final holiday, which seems to guard the threshold between Summer joys and the rush of another busy Fall and Winter.

But Labor Day plans and Labor Day weather do not always coincide, and so it is well to stock the larder with food which may be converted into an appetizing indoor feast, just in case the contrary Weather Man decides to serve up a gloomy holiday. Sandwiches aren't the best stay-at-home food on a rainy day.

A little thought will make your holiday supplies adaptable for picnic or indoor meals, particularly if you are fortunate enough to have a yard or an outdoor fireplace for your outing. Even on a brisk, clear day, the appeal of at least one warm dish should not be overlooked.

Should we take the meal one step at a time? If a stay-at-home meal seems a possibility, why not put one or two tins of clear soup in the icebox, so that the first course can be a cup of jellied consommé, or madrilene, topped with a thin slice of lemon. For a side dish order, serve a dish of crackers topped with a bit of cheese, which have been popped under the broiler.

Of course, you'll have eggs, ham (or hot dogs), cheese, potatoes, celery, pickles, rolls and fruit on hand. Instead of the picnic potato salad, why not a big casserole of scalloped potatoes, flavored with just a trace of onion?

If potatoes are not in favor, try a macaroni or spaghetti dish on the family, for this may be assembled in advance and popped into the oven at the proper time for indoor or outdoor serving. A macaroni dish also combines well with sliced tomatoes, as a salad or vegetable course.

Even the hot dogs are tempting indoors, if they are baked in a hot oven in a serving dish, and accompanied by plenty of hot coffee. And hamburgers are luscious, cooked with onion and tomatoes. If ham sandwiches were among your plans, and the outdoor picnic is cancelled, broil it lightly and serve with scrambled eggs and toast, or serve broiled ham on toast, topped with a poached egg.

Cold fruit is not a very exciting dessert indoors, so have some cream on hand for whipping, and perhaps some tart shells for good measure. Or make a quick vanilla custard to round out the sliced peaches. If the ice box also boasts a roll of cookies, so much the better. Perhaps you can prepare a chocolate mousse in the refrigerator, which could be packed for transportation.

Another adaptable item for the emergency shelf is canned salmon, which is delicious served cold with lemon, greens, mayonnaise and pickles. Salmon also suggests such other quick dishes as patties, French-fried fritters, creamed plain, or with vegetables, or a salmon loaf, which is excellent with a salad of greens and stuffed celery.

Here's for a successful Labor Day party, regardless of whether the sun is working.

Falls Township Renews Fire Protection Agreement

but after the discussion, the old agreement was adopted. Many of the residents of Morrisville hold the township residents should be willing to pay a millage since every residents of Morrisville is required to pay one and a half mills not only on the property he owns but also on his occupation. In addition to property owners, every man and woman over 21 years of age, married and single, tenant or boarder, must also pay one and a half mills tax on his occupation for fire protection. With the residents of Morrisville so taxed, the councilmen and many of the residents point out it surely is not fair to give the township this protection without getting a fair return for the service.

It was also pointed out by members of Common Council that more than 60 per cent of the fire calls answered by the Morrisville department for the past few years have been to Falls Township.

Some time ago the proposition of levying a fire tax in Falls Township was put up to the voters of the township but it was defeated at the election. It had been suggested that a fire company be organized in the lower end of the township and with the present company at the upper end, the township could take care of its own fires then unless in case of emergency. In the latter event other companies would be glad to render assistance without cost.

HOLIDAY week-ends which bring guests require special planning if expense in time, labor and money is not to overshadow your pleasure in the company of friends and relatives. Somewhat lower wholesale prices for meats and poultry have brought attractive special retail prices in most food markets. Cheese, eggs and butter prices are still comparatively low for the season.

Vegetables and fruits in general are available in variety at low cost. Green and lima beans, corn, peas, sweet potatoes and tomatoes among the vegetables and peaches, pears, plums and grapes among the fruits are outstanding.

Here are week-end and holiday dinners which require a minimum of effort to serve.

"THE SILVER ROOD MYSTERY"

by Lewis Allen Browne

SYNOPSIS

During an afternoon party on the lawn of Major Forrest's place, Gerard Montith, extremely wealthy man of 50, living on the adjoining estate, is murdered. Montith wanted Mary, his niece, to marry Forrest's son, David, and said he would disinherit her if she refused. Mary is secretly in love with an artist, Howard Griswold. Forrest's son-in-law, Harlan Stevenson, writer of crime mysteries, is asked to help solve the mystery. He finds that Montith was killed with a knife which was disguised as a silver rood. This was hanging on the wall in another room from where Montith was found. Mary, it is learned, left the party for a half hour that afternoon. Griswold, ordered to keep away by Montith, weeks before, was also on the grounds. Mary, however, swears he was not there.

CHAPTER VI

"Nate is old and forgetful. I tell you, Mr. Stevenson, Howard wasn't here today. I am glad you believe me."

I nodded and stared at the silver rood on the wall.

"That's odd," I said, pointing to it; "Mr. Montith wasn't much of a religious man."

Mary glanced at it. There was no sign of any sort of emotion in her expression.

"That silver rood? It has no religious significance, or, I mean, it had none to Uncle Gerry. It was some sort of an ornament he picked up abroad, years and years ago. Once he said it was given to him as a sort of reward of merit."

"Did he ever explain?"

"No more. If you haven't any more questions—"

"Just a minute, Mary." I turned and took the rood from the wall and held it before her. I pressed the ratchet catch with my thumb nail and the still slightly stained blade dropped down into view.

"Oh!" Mary gasped and her eyes depicted amazement and no more, I was sure.

"How—how sort of awful—a knife out of a crucifix! But what—"

She caught her breath. "Was it done with that?" she asked, huskily.

"We have every reason to believe so. The autopsy will decide that. They have taken the blade measurements."

"I held it out for her to take. She took it without hesitation and examined it."

If she had used it to kill someone, within a few hours, she could never have touched it again, I believed.

Then she said a surprising thing.

"Even if Howard Griswold had been here today—and he wasn't—he wouldn't have known about this. I have seen this almost all my life and never knew that it was a knife, and Howard was never inside the house, much less the library. He has been on the front veranda—and that is all. Don't you see?"

"I don't see much very clearly, Mary. Why not tell me the truth?"

She lifted her head and looked at me again.

"I love Howard, and he loves me. Uncle Gerry didn't approve, that's all. He was here this afternoon for a few minutes. Uncle had forbidden me to see him again. I did meet him down in the old-fashioned garden, for about half an hour. We were making plans."

"It would have been better if you had told me at first. You didn't really go up to the house this afternoon?"

"No, no nearer than the garden."

"Of course, a poor young man like this Griswold would be hard hit if he thought you weren't to inherit any of your uncle's millions."

"He didn't know, until this afternoon, because I didn't know until today that uncle intended to cut me off if I didn't marry Dave."

"But you did tell him, this afternoon?"

"Yes. He was going to give me up—I wouldn't let him. He's wonderful—he isn't poor. He's an artist. We can get along. Don't you see, Mr. Stevenson—if that horrible thing was used, it couldn't have been Howard—and he wouldn't have gone near the house, anyway."

"Davison says he never knew that the silver rood was a disguised stiletto."

"I don't believe that he did. I don't believe anyone, other than Uncle Gerry, knew about it."

"For the present," I advised, "tell me one about Griswold, or your absence from the party. It will have to come out later."

Mary promised.

I sent her back upstairs and went out to where Sergeant Harper and Foxcroft were questioning the servants.

"stranger—or anyone you knew—out there with Mr. Montith?"

"No sir," Mrs. Johnson straightened up and stared at Harper. "If Mr. Montith died a natural death, why so many questions?" she demanded.

"You are not to mention this to the servants or anyone else, but Mr. Montith was murdered," Foxcroft told her.

She was silent a moment. Then she said, "Poor Miss Mary—she must have known, which explains why she seemed to be filled with horror, although she told me nothing."

"May I ask a question?" I said, to Foxcroft.

"Certainly."

"How—how sort of awful—a knife out of a crucifix!" Mary gasped.

Harper was questioning Mrs. Johnson, the housekeeper.

They were taking them, one by one, from the servant's hall, so that the others wouldn't know what had been asked or answered. Mrs. Johnson was a highly intelligent woman of around forty.

I had just come in as Sergeant Harper started his questions.

She was saying, "Two years, next March," I guessed, correctly, that this was the time she had come to work for Montith.

"Would you have opportunity to see anyone who might come or go from the library?"

"Occasionally. As housekeeper I go about to see that all the work is done properly. Mr. Montith was inclined to be quite sarcastic if he saw a speck of dust. Not that I blame him. He kept a large staff of servants and paid them well."

"Did you see anyone today in the library—I mean, any caller?"

"Yes sir—that is, on the library porch." She turned and looked at me. "I saw Mr. Stevenson out there. Davison served a drink."

I nodded at her.

"I was passing through the reception hall. The library door was open. Mr. Montith was standing, holding a book in his hand."

"What time?"

"After two. I couldn't say as to the minutes."

SERVE MANY VEGETABLES FOR VIM AND VITAMINS

By Edna Stephany
Home Economics Representative

With the gardens fairly groaning with their large crop productions, everyone should take advantage of the situation and obtain a full share of the health-giving substances which vegetables offer.

Vegetables are good sources of minerals, vitamins, and roughage. They also furnish some starch and sugar and their water content is high.

Vegetables are ideal for increasing the simple meal to meet various requirements. For instance, in meals for harvest days, which need to be heavy to satisfy the increased energy demands of the workers, one or two extra vegetables will satisfy the craving for extra food more satisfactorily than will sweets.

Vegetables tempt lagging appetites, since they can be prepared to tempt the eye as well as the palate. When planning a vegetable dinner, choose those which will offer harmony of form and color and variety of flavor and texture.

For an attractive vegetable dish, arrange a row of baked stuffed tomatoes on a large platter. On either side of these place young, tender, green beans, which have been cooked whole. Then heap little new parsley potatoes and buttered young carrots, quartered on each side of these. Hollandaise sauce served in a separate dish may be used with the beans.

ed to Mr. Guffey's face that the speech had been written for him, that his radio time had been arranged through Mr. Farley's office, that a few hours before he spoke he had been to the White House and conferred with the President. Unmercifully lashed by his colleagues, Mr. Guffey sat silent, white-faced, tight-lipped, without one word to say for himself. It was an unprecedented Senate scene. None of the charges made were denied and it all added weight to the complete disbelief in the "sole responsibility" of Mr. Guffey, the reasons for which are clear.

FIRST, there is the fact that there are no two more intimate politicians in the country than Mr. Farley and Mr. Guffey—and never have been. Their closeness is personal as well as political. Their co-operation for the past five years has been perfect. They think alike, they act alike and their interests are the same. There is between them complete confidence and understanding.

Second, there is the fact that to Mr. Guffey, more than any other man, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley owe the success of their 1932 nomination campaign. It was Mr. Guffey whose early endorsement blocked the Smith effort and landed in the Roosevelt column the seventy-six indispensable Pennsylvania convention votes.

Third, in the past four years Mr. Guffey has received more in the way of Federal patronage than any three Democratic Senators. It is further true that in Pennsylvania the Federal relief system has been more effectively and completely politicized than anywhere else.

FOURTH, the Roosevelt support of Mr. Guffey has been exactly equal to the Guffey support of Mr. Roosevelt. Each has been one hundred per cent for the other. The Roosevelt campaign against "economic royalists" and "princes of privilege" has been carried to more violent and demagogic extremes by the Guffey machine than by any other. That it has paid Mr. Guffey is attested by his own election to the Senate, the election of his friend, Mr. Earle, to the Governorship, and the casting of the Pennsylvania electoral vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

Fifth, next to Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Guffey's chief source of power in Pennsylvania has been Mr. Lewis. He is upon terms of intimate co-operation with Mr. Lewis in politics and all public matters. He is credited with having brought Mr. Lewis and the President together and, along with Mr. Hillman, is now that their personal relations are somewhat strained, the link between them. In the future—that is to say, 1938 and 1940—as in the past, Mr. Roosevelt's political interests and those of Mr. Guffey are inseparable and identical. What hurts one will hurt the other; what helps one, helps the other.

THESE BEING THE FACTS—and few will dispute them—to believe that Mr. Guffey, an amiable man with a not too invulnerable record and a great reluctance to being used as a target, of his own accord and initiative, would make such an attack is to be absurd. To think that this unimaginative and unobtrusive politician, who cannot take care of himself in debate, would voluntarily expose himself to what he got is not reasonable. It is much easier to believe that the fierce and threatening things he said were things which Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley very much wanted to be said, but which it would be bad strategy for them to sponsor at the time. It is easy to believe that in this matter Mr. Guffey was "drafted," and that at the time he went to the White House, the White House knew more about his speech than he did himself. As Mr. Westbrook Pegler, speaking of Mr. Jimmie Walker's visit to the White House just before he was shamefully given that Transit Commission job, sardonically asked: "What do you suppose he wanted to talk to the President about? A dog?"

THE PLOTTERS MEET IN A SIDE STREET

FIGHT FANS THRILLED BY COMEBACK OF KING

A lanky 118-lb fighter from the Holme A. A. boxing club thrilled the spectators at the St. Ann's arena last night, when, after taking a terrific beating in the first round, came back strong to trim Pat Celli, Pen Mar. The youth was Joseph King and it was his second fight in the amateur ranks, while Celli is a veteran.

In the first round, Celli pounded King unmercifully, and twice had him against the ropes. Before the canto was over, King was floored. However, from the second round on, King was a different fighter. He took the aggressiveness out of Celli and put him on the defense. At the start of the final round he shook the Pen Mar fighter with a hard right and followed with a short left which made Celli's knees buckle.

Fighters representing the St. Ann's club did not fare so well. Johnny Raccagno, Sylvester Purnell and Sammy Sindora went down to defeat, with Vince Della and Carl Spinelli emerging victors. Della scored the only knock-out of the night when he stopped Luther Davis, Sigma Theta, in the third round. The referee intervened to save Davis from further punishment after he had been floored three times by that wicked left of Della's.

Spinelli's foe was Albert Caprio, Pen Mar. Caprio was beaten from the first round, which Spinelli carried by a wide margin. He increased the lead as the fight progressed and landed effectively with his right.

Sindora was beaten by Vincent Simone, Pen Mar. The St. Ann's fighter carried the second round but lost the first and third by handsome margins. Raccagno could not acquaint himself with Nathaniel Pratt's style of fighting and went down to defeat. Raccagno was dropped in the last round, but it was more of a fall than punch. Purnell was no match for Harry Tucker and had the fight gone any longer the Purple and Gold fighter would have been stopped.

The best bout of the night was between Don Thorpey, Andalusia youngster fighting under the Holme A. A. colors, and Paul Natello, Pen Mar. These youths stood toe to toe for three rounds and exchanged blow for blow. A little edge in the first round gave Natello the fight, although several times he was shaken by short punches from the arms of Thorpey.

In the other bouts, Rocco Piccinino, Pen Mar, lost to Frank Coleman, Sigma Theta, in a bout which was fast, and featured by the classy fighting of the colored youngster who did very effective blocking. Joe Amico, Pen Mar, rallied in the last round to take the decision from Rosel Johnson, who compiled a slight lead in the first two sessions. In the other bout, William Silvester, Holme A. A., was better than William Brinkley, Sigma Theta, in an interesting bout.

After the fifth bout, intermission was called and the spectators listened to the blow-by-blow description of the Joe Louis-Tommy Farr bout through the amplifying system installed.

Bouts will be held again next Monday night.

"MILT" JONES LIKELY TO BE CHOICE FOR PLAY-OFF

ODD FELLOWS at HIBERNIANS
(Landreth's Field)
Umpires: McGinley, Fields and Kervick
Scorer: Dolan

Standing	Won	Lost	Pct.
Hibernians	2	1	.667
Odd Fellows	1	2	.333

"Milt" Jones will most likely be Manager Bob Sutton's choice to attempt to even the playoff series of the Bristol Twilight League as the fourth tilt is scheduled for tonight on Landreth's field. The game will begin at six o'clock. The Hibernians are leading the Odd Fellows, two games to one, and need this victory for the championship.

Manager Lawrence Delaney, Hibs, will send Dave Ennis in against the Radcliffe street team. In the second game played, Ennis blanked the Odds, 2-0, a home run from the bat of "Gike" Dougherty deciding the issue. This will be the most interesting game of the playoff as the Hibs will be striving to win and end the series and the Odds will attempt to extend it to the necessary fifth game. The Odd Fellows are encouraged because of their 7-6 victory Sunday.

ADEPT FLYING STUDENT

TULSA, Okla.—(INS)—Although six hours' instruction in the air is generally regarded as the minimum requirement to solo and obtain a student aviator's license, Lois Hollingsworth, 16-year-old Tulsa girl, today had done both with but four hours and 46 minutes' instruction. Lois' next goal is a private license and she plans to go from there to a career in aeronautical engineering.

"BRONX CHEER" DAMAGING

HAVANA — (INS) — The "Bronx cheer," locally known as a "trumpet," has revealed it can be a lethal weapon. Luis Alvarez Rego, 27, told police he was drinking in a cabaret and decided to sing with the orchestra when a stranger "gave him the trumpet." "The next I knew," complained Rego, "I was in the hospital with a broken arm."

HOUSE OF DAVID NINE TO PLAY LANDRETH SEEDS

The original House of David baseball team, the bewhiskered gentlemen, representing Benton Harbor, Mich., will be the attraction tomorrow night at the Landreth ball park.

The House of David has always been one of the best touring baseball clubs in the United States. This team goes through training just like the big leagues. Every year, early in the season, the players assemble at some point in Florida. One year it was Lake Wales, another year Vero Beach. After they have worked out for some time they then play National and American League clubs and members of the A. A. organizations, and hold victories over a number of these big league teams.

The House of David played "Landreth's Seeds" early in the season, and after a very close and exciting game defeated the farmers. Three or four of the members of this organization are very clever when it comes to handling and juggling the baseballs, and when they appeared here early in the Spring, put on a most entertaining exhibition. It is hoped they will do the same thing tomorrow night. Manager Landreth has not decided just who he will start, but it will be either Ashby or lack.

The fans who saw the first game between the House of David and "Landreth's Seeds" no doubt have told their friends of the interest the game held from a spectator's viewpoint, and it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand. This game will be the final twilight game of the season. The game will start at 6 p. m.

JOE LOUIS BOOED AFTER GETTING DECISION

NEW YORK, Aug. 31—Joe Louis was booed last night after being awarded the decision in his 15-round battle with Tommy Farr at the Yankee Stadium. Farr's cheeks were terribly cut by 100 left jabs and there were splits under both his eyes.

Farr made a wonderful showing and had all the best of the 15th round by a wide margin. He was a nasty and annoying foe. He circled clockwise from the opening of the gong, moved elbows and shoulders as protective armor and fought exactly the kind of a battle he had planned.

Louis did not land his famed right more than five times and each time Farr was shifting, weaving or charging forward.

He won the first and second rounds, dropped the next three, and they seemed to take turns winning the rest until the electric clock flashed "15."

Many score sheets had the fight even to this point and Farr came charging out to bully and win the final round in a flurry of rights to the colored boy's chin, ribs and temple. It was a brave, swaggering finish.

The decision of the referee and two judges was unanimous. Two of the officials, Referee Arthur Donovan and Judge Charley Lynch, had been selected to work every one of Louis' battles in New York, both before and after he won the title.

Farr seemed disappointed at the verdict. The crowd booed for several minutes and would not permit the next bout to be announced over their yells.

Farr was first in the ring. His right cheekbone was bruised. He looked serious and shot several inquisitive glances at Louis who popped through the ropes wearing his famous Referee Arthur Donovan smiled and spoke pleasantly to both men when he called them to the ring center. It was an affable evening all around—until the gong was banged.

Tommy Farr (left) and Joe Louis did some of their most vicious fighting at close range in the fifteen-round championship bout at Yankee Stadium, New York. Here they are shown tangled in a clinch. The game, tenacious, truculent young Britisher had the crowd with him in the hard fight, one of the best seen in the East in many years.
